OVERVIEW

When events happen that affect our lives and the way we do work, there can be an impact on the mental health of workers. Organizations that build mental health into their emergency management and business continuity programs will be able to respond to such events in a coordinated and effective manner, thereby protecting their workers and focusing on solutions to support their operations. This webinar covers how to use the National Standard of Canada on Psychological Health and Safety in the Workplace for guidance.

ABOUT

Liz Horvath brings over 20 years of experience guiding organizations to achieve better business outcomes through strategic integration of health, safety and wellbeing. She joined the Opening Minds Team of the Mental Health Commission of Canada in August 2019, where she leads the development and implementation of workplace mental health strategies that align with the National Standard of Canada for Psychological Health and Safety in the Workplace, and other programs and modules that encourage mental wellness and safety. She is a Canadian Registered Safety Professional (CRSP) and is a member of the Canadian Society of Safety Engineering (CSSE), the International Association on Workplace Bullying and Harassment (IAWBH), the Crisis and Trauma Research Institute (CRTI), and the Human Resources Professionals Association (HRPA).
