

48th ANNUAL CONFERENCE

FAMILIES AND THE LAW

For all members of the legal community

Program

OCTOBER 9 TO 11, 2024 | IN PERSON & ONLINE | WINNIPEG

Delta Hotels Winnipeg, 350 St Mary Avenue, Winnipeg, MB R3C 3J2

“Families and the law”

CIAJ’s 48th annual conference will discuss the justice system as it affects families in Canada. The conference will consider the wide ambit of concerns regarding the system’s ability to aid families in resolving their disputes. Are there enough resources available? Are the courts and tribunals the best forum for families and children? Are we ready for a culture shift or paradigm shift? There is no doubt that improving the situation for families in difficult and sometimes heartbreaking situations is paramount. All members of the legal community are invited to join forces to explore these issues and offer some solutions.

- Bilingual program with simultaneous interpretation.
- Participation in this program is accredited in provinces where CLE requirements for lawyers are mandatory.
- Participation in this program is approved under Section 41 (1) of the Judges Act.

HONORARY CHAIR

The Honourable Justice Michelle O'Bonsawin, Supreme Court of Canada

An Abenaki member of the Odanak First Nation in Quebec and the first Indigenous judge appointed to the Ontario Superior Court of Justice in Ottawa. 10:00–11:30 AM	Panel 1 – Reforming Family Law Systems: Putting Families at the Center Despite recent reforms, many who interact with family law systems in Canada experience legal processes which are alienating, inaccessible, and at times hostile. This panel will introduce the conference's overarching themes through a discussion of what positive outcomes for children and families might look like, how our current family law systems fail to ensure those outcomes, and ways in which we might redesign family law to better serve the needs of Canadians.

11:30–12:30 PM	Harnessing Brain Science to Re-imagine the Family Justice System Modern brain science shows that the experiences we have in childhood change the brain in ways that make us more or less likely to succeed in school, at work, as parents, and in other family relationships. Childhood adversity affects more than just our academic and social outcomes: it also makes us more vulnerable to mental health and substance use problems, which are a common backdrop to family justice system cases. This session will describe how brains are built, how stress undermines healthy brain development, and how to promote resilience in children and families. Applying this science to family justice system reform is a complex challenge that will require new ideas, concrete action, and system-level collaboration.

Panel 2 - Socio-Economic Impacts on Families: Navigating Legal Challenges and Financial Realities

Family law is uniquely shaped by the interplay between legal, social, and economic factors, and in the absence of robust and equitable family law systems, individuals and families are vulnerable to a range of negative outcomes including poverty, housing insecurity, and unequal access to justice. The panel will discuss the socio-economic issues which underpin family law in Canada, exploring both legal and extra-legal reforms which might alleviate the burdens that participants in the family law system bear. The discussion will pay particular attention to interdisciplinary approaches including examples of immigration law intersection with family-related rights, social support programs and community resources, Canada child benefit coverage, and the need for increased provincial programming.

Panel 3 - Protecting Our Future: Exploring Challenges and Solutions in Child Protection

“Child Protection” is a concept that includes not just the immediate health and safety of the child, but a broader approach to the social, legal, and educational environments that shape a child’s upbringing. This panel considers what meaningful outcomes for children interacting with the justice system entail, from ensuring positive resolutions for ongoing cases, to early intervention and prevention strategies to limit the number of children in need of protection. Discussion will include perspectives on current shortcomings of Canadian child protection systems.

Panel 5 – Unveiling the Layers: Understanding and Addressing Intimate Partner Violence

To properly address intimate partner violence (IPV), courts and legal practitioners must gain a far more fulsome understanding of the psychological, social, and legal characteristics of IPV than is currently evidenced within our family law systems. This panel will take an interdisciplinary approach towards the dynamics of IPV, from the coercive power imbalances between victims and perpetrators, to the underreporting of IPV, particularly within marginalized communities, to the barriers victims face when accessing the justice system.

- Moderator:
- The Honourable Justice Lore Mirwaldt, (Family Division) Court of King's Bench of Manitoba (Winnipeg)
- Speakers:
- Jennifer Koshan, Professor & Research Excellence Chair, Faculty of Law, University of Calgary (Calgary)

3:00–3:15 PM Health Break

3:15–4:30 PM Panel 6 - Understanding High-Conflict Families and Paths to Resolution

As the number of high-conflict family court disputes increases, this panel explores the dynamics of high-conflict families, the challenges they present to family courts, and how we might resolve those problems through reform. What makes a family “high-conflict”? How do current administrative practices exacerbate existing problems? Do adversarial legal systems enable high-conflict family disputes, and how might we move towards more constructive dispute resolution models?

- Moderator:
- The Honourable Justice Julie Audet, Ontario Superior Court of Justice (Ottawa)

- Speakers:
- Dr. Rachel Birnbaum, Co-Director, Research Institute with Children, King's University College (London)

Workshop: Innovations in Family Law – New ways of Supporting Families

As we look to the future of family law in Canada, recent scholarship and advocacy are paving the way for innovative solutions to the challenges Canadian family law currently faces. In this interactive workshop, you will be invited to actively engage in discussions with our panelists, who will explore various strategies for resolving family law disputes while minimizing the impact on children. Topics will include collaborative lawyering, the concept of one lawyer representing both parties in a divorce, neutral advice provided to both parties, as well as gender equity in compensatory support and the role of punishment in family law.

Together, we will also consider digital tools and broader structural changes designed to alleviate case backlogs and improve access to justice. This workshop will be a unique opportunity to exchange ideas and co-create innovative solutions for the future of family law in Canada.

50 YEARS OF CIAJ

Indigenous Justice System: A Knowledge Sharing Symposium

CIAJ's 2nd edition of the Indigenous Justice System – a Knowledge Sharing Symposium will bring together members of Indigenous communities, judges, legal professionals, and law students across Canada to discuss and reflect on the evolution of the Indigenous Justice System in relation to colonial laws and courts.

This conference will take place on Tsuut'ina Nation land adjacent to Calgary from November 4 to 6, 2024.

Indigenous Peoples at the forefront

Indigenous Peoples are best served by the system when their laws, morals, values, customs and needs are prioritized.

This conference is a space for dialogue and knowledge sharing among indigenous leaders and elders, and actors of the legal system on how Indigenous communities design their own legal institutions and how they interact with the existing legal system to better create a justice system reflective of Indigenous culture and values. For dialogue and exchange on the continuation of active education and exploration of ways to narrow the gaps and work closely with and under the Leadership of Indigenous Peoples, which is critical to all who are involved. Together, we aim to collectively identify solutions for improved collaboration and outcomes.

Focus on solutions

The various presentations, sessions and panels will consider the wide ambit of realities and challenges regarding the system's ability to serve Indigenous communities, families and individuals. Are there enough resources available? Are courts and tribunals the best forum for them? Which other resources may be optimal to reach resolutions and improve outcomes in cases? In person and online participants will discuss in depth, share experiences and practices, challenging the current state of affairs as we work closely towards continuous improvement.
