

CIAJ STUDENT SECTION – COMMITTEE

PURPOSE

- Incorporate student participation in existing CIAJ projects
- Develop new student-focused and student-lead initiatives

ORGANIZATION

The Committee is a representative body of students interested in law from across Canada, composed of:

- Young jurists and law students
- Students studying in the sciences, humanities and political sciences interested in law
- Students just beginning their studies and those navigating the world after the end of theirs
- A plural and diverse membership that takes into account the myriad of experiences with the law in the implementation of its projects

PROJECTS

Committee membership involves participation in many of CIAJ's projects. These include:

- Choosing and researching the subject of the Law Student Panel at CIAJ's Annual Conference on pressing topics such as artificial intelligence, criminal delays and jury representation
- Sitting-in and drafting reports on CIAJ's national roundtables discussions between stakeholders, judges, lawyers and academics
- Developing CIAJ's projects concerning mental health and well-being and access to justice
- Creating and implementing new projects and initiatives
- Reviewing the applicants for CIAJ's judicial internships and essays prizes
- Acting as CIAJ ambassadors at law faculties

BENEFITS

- Becoming a CIAJ member
- Being involved in the discussion of problems and reform of important legal issues
- Networking opportunities through ICAJ's symposiums, roundtables, seminars and conferences bringing together judges, lawyers, and academics from across Canada
- Expansion of inter-student and inter-faculty collegiate network
